Last year UK was just 1-7 in the SEC and were outgained by 200.1 ypg, which was the worst mark in the conference. They only have 13 starters back, which is among the fewest in the league. Their LB corps was decimated during the spring, losing 2 projected starters, so that unit went from a strength to a weakness. There is quite a bit of ground to make up in the SEC and unfortunately most of the winnable SEC games are on the road. This looks like another rebuilding year for the Cats but better things should be in the future.
